(and so was Custard)When Custard stole the show.When there was a dance at Foxes Dale.When the day wouldn't keep still.When Roobarb got a long break.When the pipes call the tune.When a knight lost his day.When Custard got too near the bone.When there was a big mix-up.

So-called Scopitones were similar in effect to the Soundies of the 1940s, but much improved technically, inasmuch as the 3-4 minute films were produced on 16mm in colour, with magnetic sound and could be viewed individually. Several different companies made them for showing on the Scopitone machines which were located in bars, cafés and restaurants. They were particularly popular in France. This writer remembers at least one of them in regular use in an Italian coffee bar in London.

It has been suggested quite reasonably that the Krupa Band was in fact the Butch Stone Band for whom many of the listed musicians were playing at the time of filming. It is likely that an arrangement was concluded between Monogram Studios and Stone to refer to the band as being Krupa's simply because his name would look better on the marquee.

The 130-segment, 3-year run of "Stars of Jazz" in Southern California is notoriously difficult to document accurately in view of the permanent loss of 65% of the series and the errors and omissions in listings, discographies and sleeve notes. No reliable filmography of the series has yet been published and it is a subject long overdue for in-depth research. The entries here should therefore be seen as being work in progress as some of the personnel listings have yet to be established and others confirmed. In general the dates given are recording dates; first transmissions were not necessarily on the same dates.

USA 1967 – f
dir Terence Young

Music by: Henry Mancini

Music Directed/Conducted by: Henry Mancini

Music Orchestrated by: Leo Shuken, Jack Hayes

Soundtrack Personnel: Inc: Hoyt Bohannon, George Roberts, Dick Nash, trombone; Bud Shank, Ted Nash, Ronnie Lang, woodwinds;

Songs: Title song by Jay Livingston, Ray Evans, Henry Mancini, sung by Sue Raney. Recorded on 19th/20th June 1967 at Warner Bros. Scoring Stage, Burbank. One of two matched pianos was deliberately tuned a quarter-tone flat so that the difference in pitch would be very disturbing when the same chords were played together. Numerous contemporary sources both in the UK and in the USA claim that the end title song is performed by Bobby Darin but this appears to be an error that has been blindly copied across the years.

dir László Benedek

Music by: Leith Stevens

Music Arranged by: Shorty Rogers

Soundtrack Personnel: Inc: Shorty Rogers, Mannie Klein, Pete Candoli, trumpet; Milt Bernhart, trombone; Bud Shank, reeds; Johnny Williams, drums.

Although this mainly source music score was composed and arranged specifically to be performed by Shorty Rogers and his Giants the studio would not allow Rogers to use his own musicians for the soundtrack; it had to be performed by Columbia's staff orchestra. But Rogers himself was allowed to solo and Bud Shank has assured this writer that he was on the session together with Milt Bernhart (who was already contracted to the studio) and Pete Candoli. The various commercially issued "soundtrack recordings" must therefore be viewed with some suspicion.
